Supported by Thai Media Fund

People with Covid
are separated from society for treatments.

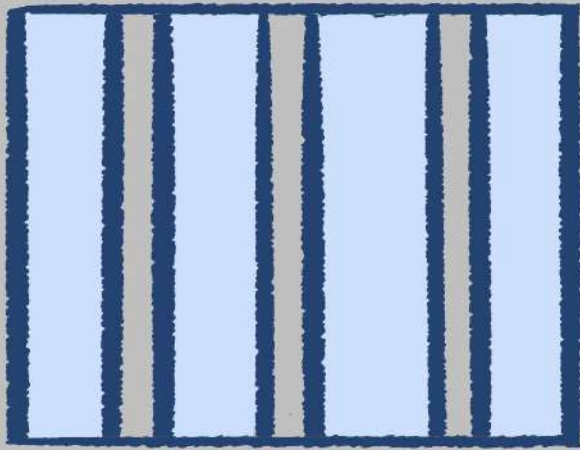

After being recovered,
they can live with others again.

Wrongdoers
are separated from society to be punished.

There will be a day to come out
and return to society.

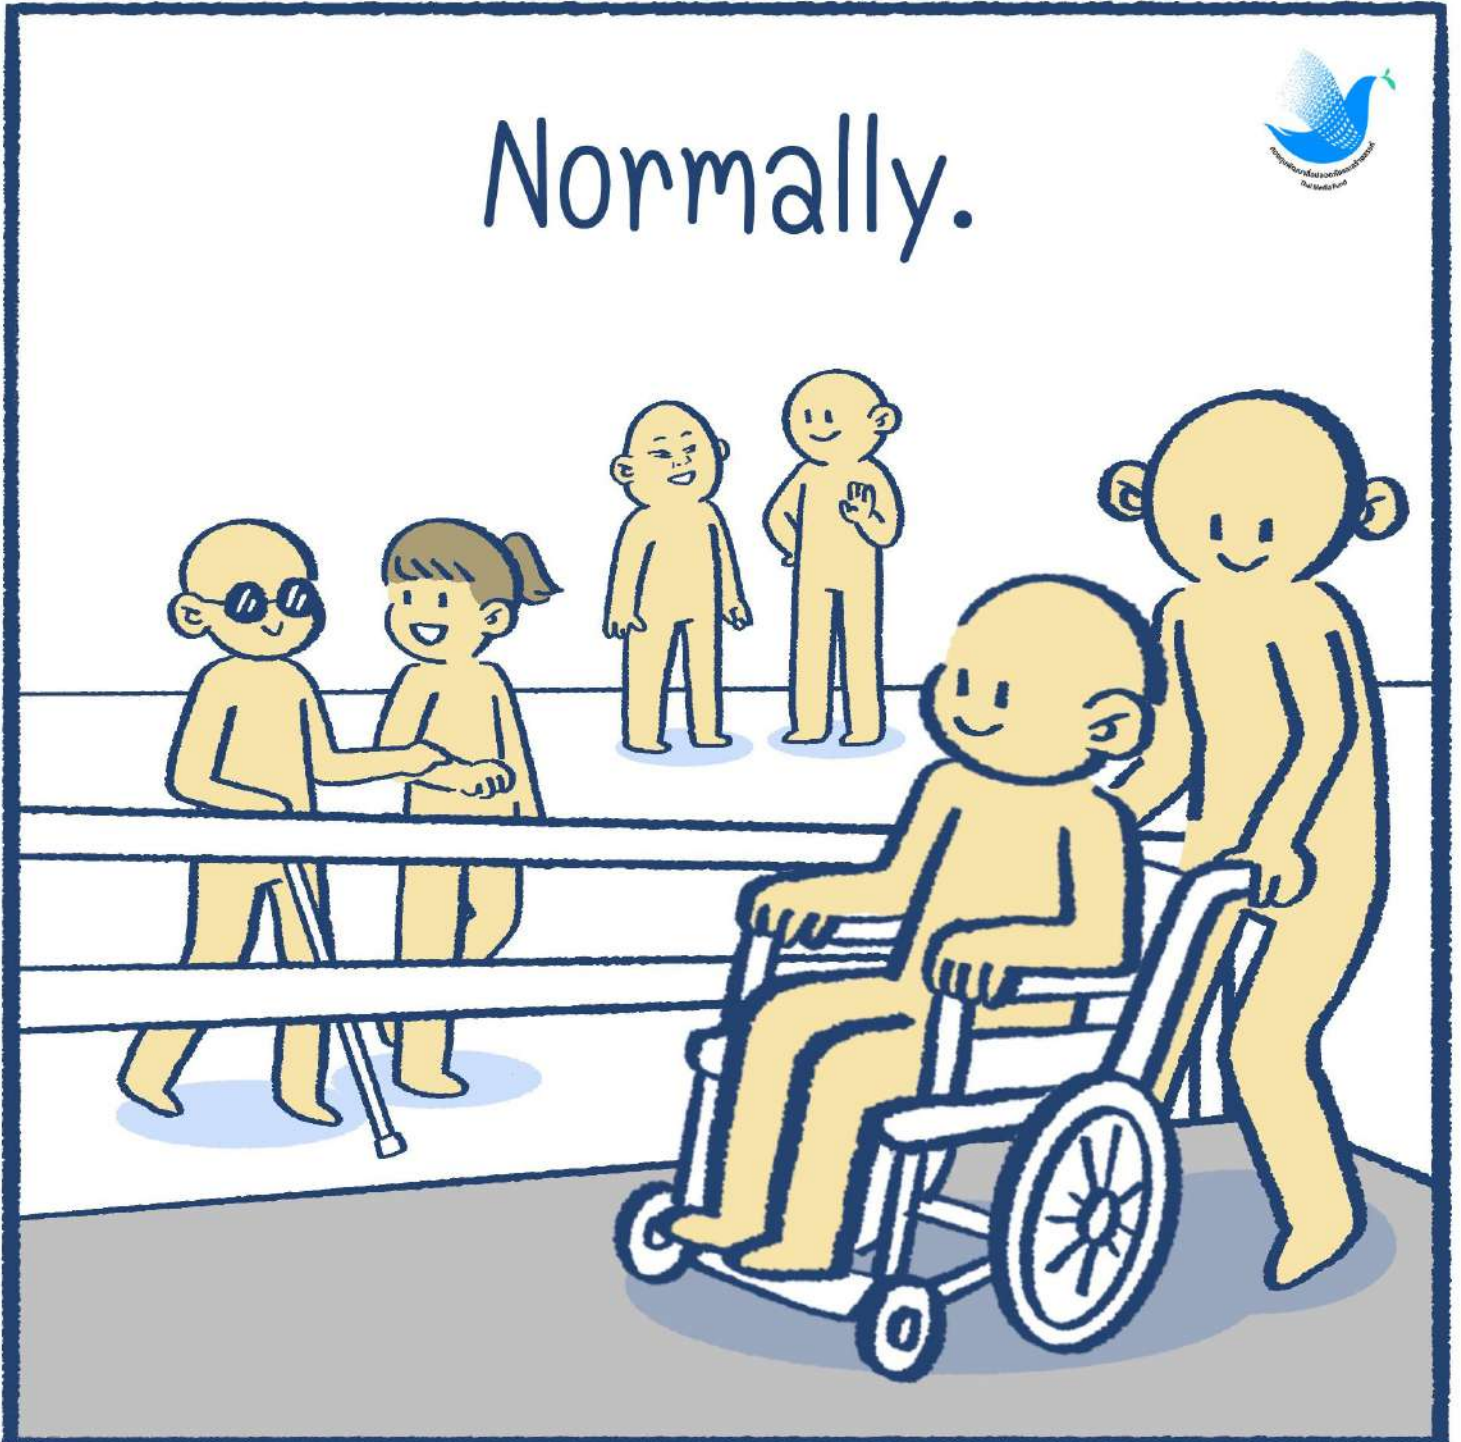

What about people with disability...
What are they separated from society for?

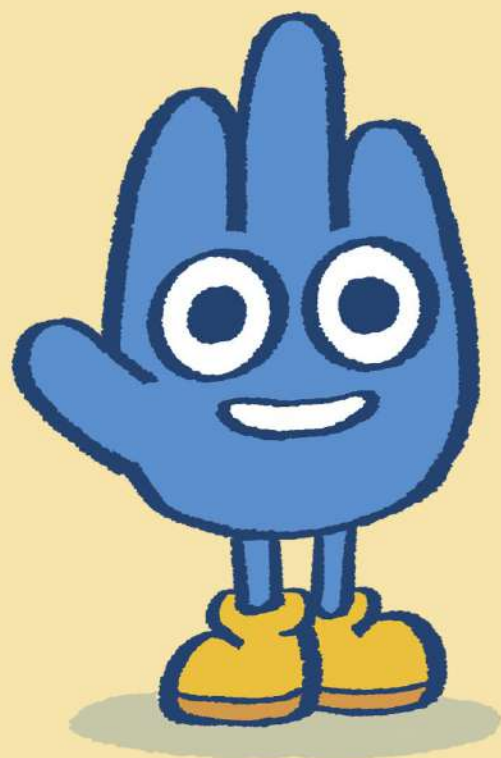

And, when will they be free
to live like others?

Normally.

Not hard
at all
to stay together

If different people live together,
we will learn about one another.
We'll understand and live together happily
according to the social learning skill
of human nature.
